Berkshire Hathaway to Acquire Burlington Industries

February 11, 2003 -- Greensboro, NC and Omaha, Nebraska. Burlington Industries, Inc. (OTCBB: BRLG) and Berkshire Hathaway, Inc. (NYSE: BRK.A and BRK.B) announced today that they have executed a definitive agreement for Berkshire Hathaway to acquire Burlington Industries. The amount payable in the transaction to creditors of Burlington, which began Chapter 11 reorganization proceedings in 2001, is estimated to be $579 million, subject to adjustments. Following emergence from Chapter 11, Burlington would operate as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Berkshire Hathaway.

The details of the transaction are set forth in papers being filed with the Court and with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Under the proposed plan, Burlington's secured creditors would be paid in full and its pre-petition unsecured creditors would receive cash and certain other assets estimated to be 34-35% of their claims. All shares of Burlington's Common Stock would be canceled with no payment. Burlington would emerge with no debt, other than ordinary course liabilities and certain pre-petition obligations, having repaid the majority of the $1.1 billion of liabilities it had prior to its bankruptcy filing, and eliminating the balance through the bankruptcy process.

"This is a very positive outcome for the company, our employees and our creditors," said George W. Henderson, III, Chairman and CEO of Burlington. "Over the last year our efforts have increased the value of our company and allowed us to achieve a significant level of return for our creditors despite extraordinarily challenging conditions in our industry and the capital markets.

"In several recent cases, other companies have emerged from bankruptcy with excessive debt only to be faced with renewed problems. The opportunity to be totally debt free and having made considerable progress in our globalization efforts puts us in a unique position to take full advantage of our capabilities and compete successfully in a rapidly changing textile business."

Warren E. Buffett, Chairman of Berkshire Hathaway commented further, " Only the very strong will survive in the textile industry - strong in management, strong in worker skills and strong in financial strength. Burlington brings the first two resources to a successful reorganization; Berkshire brings the latter. Burlington will go forth as a company with no debt, talented and dedicated management, and a workforce second to none. It will be a company designed for success."

Henderson continued, "We are excited to become a part of the Berkshire Hathaway family of companies. Berkshire is a company of great integrity and long-term focus, and we believe its solid foundation provides us the right environment in which to operate and grow as we implement a new and challenging business model."

Burlington will seek Court approval of procedures whereby higher and better offers to purchase Burlington may be considered and authorizing the payment to Berkshire of a termination fee in certain circumstances. Burlington pointed out that the Berkshire offer is for cash and is not dependent on obtaining outside financing. The closing of the transaction is subject to various conditions, including the completion of the alternative offer process and pre-merger notification requirements of U.S. law.

In reaching its decision to enter into the Berkshire Agreement, Burlington's Board considered a number of alternatives, including a proposal from WL Ross & Co, LLC for a stand alone reorganization. This proposal was contingent upon obtaining new debt, and would pay only secured claims in cash and then offer the unsecured creditors new common stock. Such proposal may be considered again by the Company in connection with its ultimate determination of the best and highest offer for the Company under the bidding procedures to be established by the Bankruptcy Court.

Burlington and Berkshire currently expect the closing to occur toward the end of the June quarter of FY 2003.

With operations in the United States, Mexico and India and a global manufacturing and product development network based in Hong Kong, Burlington Industries is one of the world's most diversified marketers and manufacturers of softgoods for apparel and interior furnishings.

Berkshire Hathaway is a holding company owning subsidiaries engaged in a number of diverse business activities. The most important of these is the property and casualty insurance business conducted on both a direct and reinsurance basis through a number of subsidiaries.
